THANKSGIVING PIE.

R. JINKINS used to mention to his dear, devoted wife, how the pie his mother made him was the best he ever ate. And as how, at gay Thanksgiving, in the merry days gone by, the delight of his young bosom was his mother's luscious pie.

Mrs. Jinkins tried to please him, and all sorts of pains did take, but her pie was not as tempting as his mother used to make.

And he only minced and nibbled, while in vain his wife did try to convert as good a pastry as his mother's famous pie.

Just to eat a piece of pie with all the long remembered charm, he returned, one bright Thanksgiving, to the old New England farm.

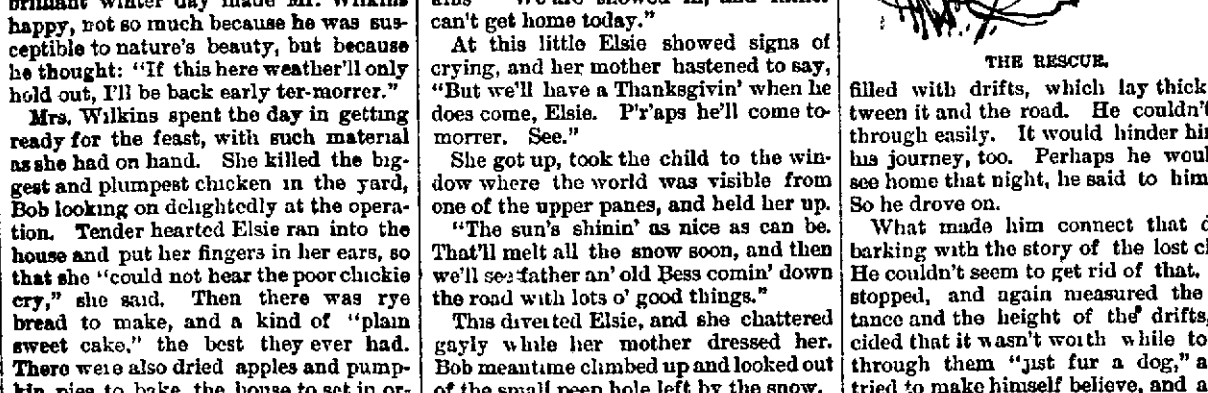

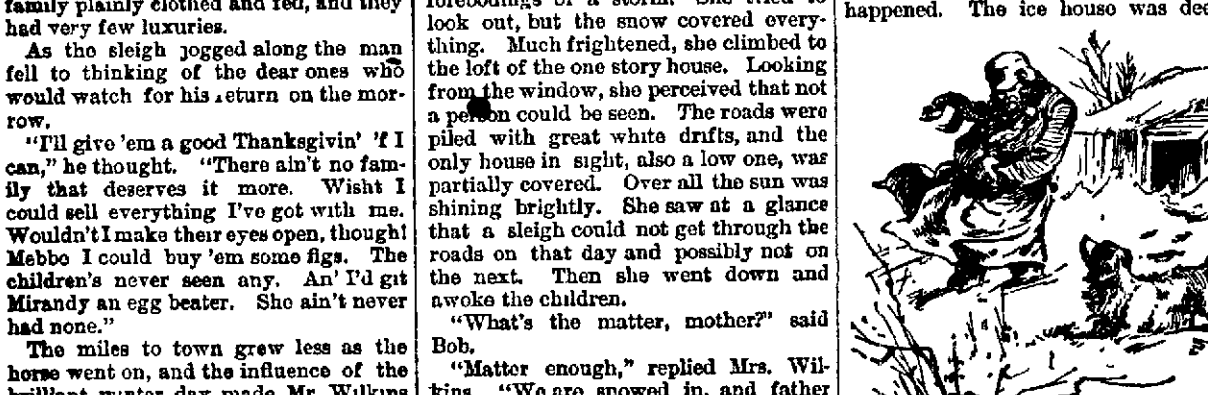

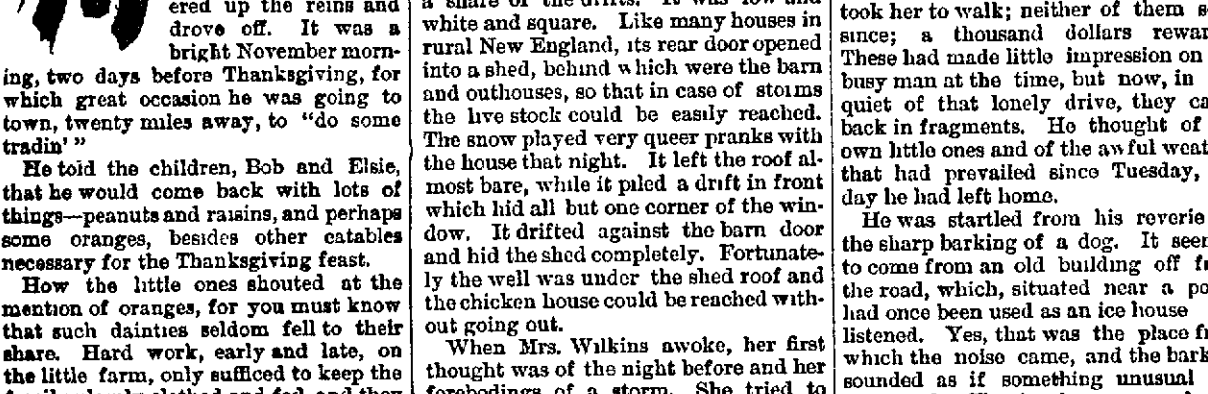

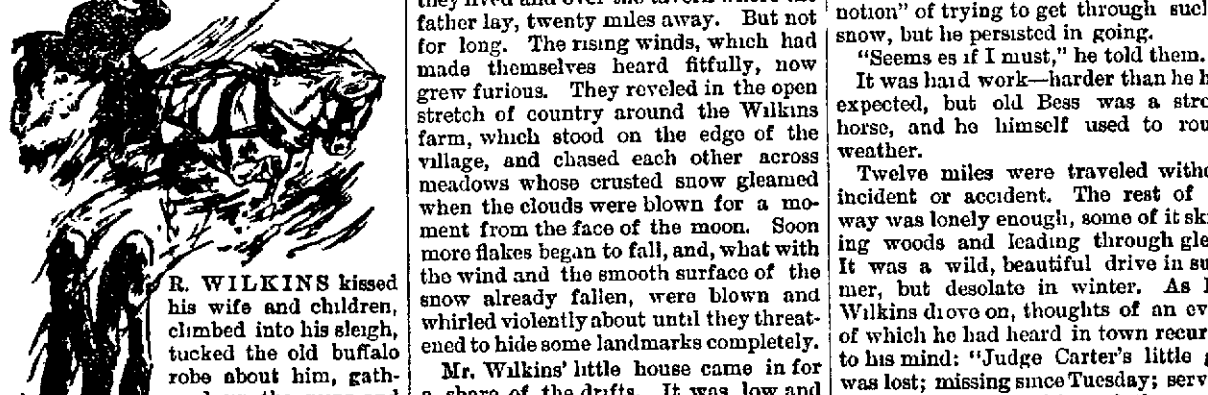

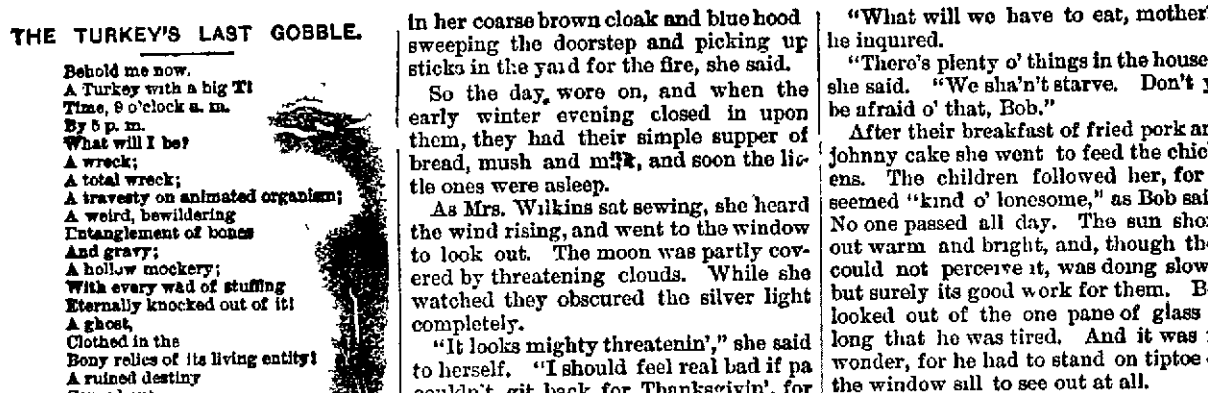

And his heart was filled with rapture, and his spirits mounted high. As he puckered up his visage for his boyhood's famous pie.

But he found himself unable his Thanksgiving to enjoy. With the same decided relish that he used to when a boy.

And he left the feast half eaten, and admitted, with a sigh, that the change was in his appetite, and wasn't in the pie.

horse with the sleigh robe and striking out for the house. It was a struggle even for the sturdy farmer. As he neared the place the barking grow louder. The door on the side toward him was almost covered, so he made for the rear. That had been sheltered from drifts by the building, and a small door was accessible there. As he opened it a handsome Newfoundland dog rushed out, jumping on him and whining for joy. Mr. Wilkins' eyes, dazzled by the snow, could at first see nothing, but the dog pulled him toward the most sheltered corner of the place, where a four-year-old girl lay, white and motionless.

Mr. Wilkins dropped down beside her and felt her hands, head, and finally her heart. The little one was not dead, as he first thought, and his chief care was to revive her. Being utterly exhausted, all he could do at first was to fold her in his arms under his overcoat. Presently he started for the sleigh, followed by the faithful dog whose devotion had perhaps saved the child's life. He was anxious to reach the sleigh, for he had bethought himself of a bottle of milk which his host had put up with a lunch for him. That and the air seemed to revive the child. She clung to him, crying, until the dog poked his nose into her hand as he sat beside them on the sleigh seat. Then she smiled and tried to pat him, calling him "Nero," her word for "Nero," which was the name on his collar. As soon as she had recovered sufficiently to sit up, Mr. Wilkins drove on towards home, planning to send word by the next person that passed his house bound toward, for he felt sure this was Judge Carter's lost daughter.

His work was not over when he reached home, and saw the little group waiting in the window for him. It was necessary to shovel his way in. His wife threw a rope to him from the loft window, attaching a shovel on the other end so that he could haul it out. When the way was clear he brought the now sleeping child in, and told how he had found her and the story he had heard.

Then what a talking and running to and fro commenced! The baby must be petted and fed and put to sleep, and the handsome dog must receive some attention.

THE DELIGHTS OF HOME.

"Will you tell us your name, dear?" said Mrs. Wilkins to the child, as she took her in her arms. "Name, Nellie," said she, and, sure enough, her gold pin was so engraved. "Mary," "ride," "doggy" and "big man," were all she could say plainly about where she had been. It was no one could understand her sweet prattle but her mother. At the thought of that sorrowing woman, Mrs. Wilkins said with tears in her eyes: "O Samuel, I'm just grieved thinking about this baby's mother. When can we send word?"

"Likes not some one'll be going to town in the mornin', Mirandy," he replied. After drinking a cup of tea which Mrs. Wilkins started out to get, he worked, Mr. Wilkins started out to get his horse and sleigh under cover. This done, he prepared for a pleasant evening with his family. As the children had asked questions to their heart's content about his adventure, the talk drifted around to themselves.

"We haven't had any Thanksgiving, father," said Elsie, as she sat on his knee. "I think we have, child," said Mrs. Wilkins. "Isn't it Thanksgiving enough to see father back safe? That's better than all the dinners we could eat."

"Never mind, Elsie; we'll keep Thanksgiving to-morrow," said her father. "I don't know 's it makes much difference when we keep it as long as we're thankful enough."

"An' have lots to eat," put in Bob. "What do you bring us, father?" "You jest wait till morning an' see, Bob," said Mrs. Wilkins.

When morning came they found the oranges and raisins and all the good things, even to the figs, and to tell of what a feast they had, and how jolly they were, and how the little stranger enjoyed it with them, would be a long story.

It was not hard to interest their nearest neighbor in the lost child, and, as he had kept Thanksgiving on the right day, he volunteered to go at once to town. It was found that a servant had gone to walk with little Nellie and Nero, the dog, a little distance up the road, she had said. They had not returned, but the girl was last seen riding with a stranger whose elocution had prevented his being recognized. Nothing definite was ever found out, but it was conjectured that she, wanting to be rid of the child and dog without going home, had left them in the old ice house, supposing that the dog's barking would attract attention from passers-by.

The grateful parents insisted on doubling the reward when they learned how much Mr. Wilkins had done to find little Nellie. The sum seemed like a fortune to the poor farmer. He bought more land with it, and very good land it proved to be, so good that it made his less hard for the Wilkins family. Little luxuries, hitherto unknown, became possible, and there never was a time when, from a pecuniary as well as a moral point of view, Mr. Wilkins was not glad he had fought his way through the drifts into the icehouse at the call of the dog and so saved the little one that was lost.

MELEAGRIS GALLOPAYO.

Which is the "Botanical Name" of the Patriotic Thanksgiving Bird. If the fathers of the republic had been granted the right and power to create a truly patriotic and native American bird especially for Thanksgiving, and exactly suited for it, they could not possibly have done better than nature had already done. The turkey fills the bill. He is toothsome, he is gamey, he is wholesome, nourishing, and does not cloy. He is born at the right season, "comes in" just at the right time, is better by nature than by cultivation, and he is exclusively American. No other land has such a fowl. He is not only American, he is pan-American—that is, pan-North American. From the woods of the upper Saguenay to the forests of Florida, to speak scientifically, meleagris gallopavo is indigenous—in other words, the wild turkey was found native to the woods.

His intellect also is peculiarly American. He is a wily bird and does not give himself away without sufficient cause. He is ardent in love and savage in war, like other Americans. Like them, too, his ardor has often been the death of him; for it is only by "calling"—that is, imitating the voice of his mate—that the hunter can lure the wild turkey towards him. The practice was condemned by true sportsmen, for it was only practicable during the season when the turkey is not at his best. It is a curious fact, and known to but few in these wild turkeyless times, that the bird himself furnished the bones which served to "call" him to destruction. A single bone, about as long as one's forefinger, in each male turkey is hollow and of just the right shape for piping. With a little practice any one with an average ear can eject the breath through it in a way to make an exact imitation of the female turkey's love notes. At any rate, it is exact enough to deceive the male.

Dr. Franklin may have been joking when he suggested the turkey as the emblem of the United States instead of the eagle, but his suggestion had much to support it. The bird, as aforesaid, is native, exclusively American, wily and warlike. He is also in his native state a traveler and explorer. To the ordinary rivers the wild turkey paid little heed. The St. Lawrence and the Mississippi often baffled him, for it is rare, indeed, for a wild turkey to fly a mile. Even at his best estate he relies more on running than flying. From marked and tagged specimens turned loose after capture it has been shown that the turkey travels far. The great plains of the west barred his progress, however, as he insists on an abundance of clean running water.

Meleagris gallopavo is gone, practically extinct in most of the country, but he is tolerably well represented by Meleagris Americana—the common farmyard fowl—and in Europe the descendants of those turkeys which William Strickland, lieutenant to Sebastian Cabot, carried to England, are numbered by millions and are classified in several species and varieties. From the cradle to the grave the domestic turkey is interesting. First the delicately tinted and lovely speckled eggs, and in caring for them the female almost resumes her wild nature. She conceals her nest with rare talent, rarely approaches it twice by the same route, and always makes a wide circuit in leaving it for the barnyard, coming in from some other direction with an innocent air that is amusing. The young are almost as tender as babies; it is in August that the growing bird begins to show what is in him. As the fruitful autumn advances he takes on the high and glossy shades of adult life, and in November is in just the right stage to be sacrificed, and most generally is. Peace to his ashes!

A Natural Presumption.

"Great heavens!" said the barnyard rooster, as he watched the feeble foraging of a poor turkey, after the ax came down, "I wonder what the matter is with his ribs, the gobbler?"

"Well, judging from his actions," replied a facetious little bantam, "I should say that he had lost his head."

DAILY NEVADA STATE JOURNAL

C. C. FOWNING, Editor and Proprietor.

In common with all patriotic Americans, the many employees of the Journal desire to observe Thanksgiving Day. In order that they may pay their undivided attention to the excellent turkey there will be no Journal to-morrow.

Powderly has strong hopes of perfecting an alliance between the Knights of Labor and the Farmers' Alliance. He says such a combination would have 3,000,000 votes, an army so vast that politicians would not dare to spurn it. That may be true, but would his army all vote the same way?

Senator Allison's calling and election is said to be sure, in spite of the so-called Republican defeat in Iowa. This is good news, independent of all partisan considerations, for the nation could not well spare Allison from the United States Senate.

COAST DEFENSE.

In his annual report the Secretary of War speaks of the immediate necessity of coast defenses, as follows:

I assume that the exposed condition of our sea-coast requires no proof, nor the necessity of defending it any argument. If there is an apparent sense of security among our people it is born not of ignorance, but of thoughtlessness. Although our position and the traditions of our Nation, and the fact that the maintenance of peace, a defenseless condition will ever invite attack. The actual value of the property thus exposed to a public enemy, although many times the cost of simply protecting it, bears but little proportion to the magnitude of the material interests of the whole Nation equally endangered thereby. It is not a local question. Not only is the National honor at stake, but all, whether a hostile fleet in the streets of New York strikes the prizes as well as their corn and wheat share in the loss. Still the great burden will fall upon the States contiguous to the sea-board in the immediate maintenance of the militia required to man the defenses in case of danger.

Celerity promises to be an essential element in any warfare of the future. We have shown our ability to equip and place in the field with rapidity large numbers of men, and could undoubtedly do so again. The defenses and armament, however, necessary for withstanding the attacks of modern guns, can not be extemporized. We must substantially have them before the necessity arises. Their creation is not a matter of hours and days, but of months and years. Hence, I deem it quite as self-evident that if we are to have such works at all they should be begun earnestly and systematically at once.

I submit as a basis to start from that no time is to be lost in placing the capital of the country, the commercial metropolis on the Atlantic seaboard, and at least one port on the Pacific in the best possible state of defense. How rapidly the work shall be carried on until it embraces every important vulnerable point from the St. Johns to the Rio Grande and the ports of the Pacific, is the only question. In my view progress cannot be too rapid. The Major General Commanding has given in detail the requirements of armament and men for the Atlantic and the Gulf coast, and General Miles has devoted special attention to the defenses of the Pacific, and made an excellent report thereon.

Not only does this subject demand attention now, but fortunately our general prospective for the present as the auspicious time for pressing the work. It is therefore, that Congress will make a liberal appropriation for this purpose. We are making excellent progress with our navy, but it has no safe base for repairs and supplies or harbor of refuge in case of accident or disaster. It is impossible to overestimate the services it will render in encouraging and protecting our commerce. But however important it may be to carry out the foreign ports, to defend it in our own is imperative.

It appears by the report of the Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance that we are now in a position to turn out mortars as rapidly as we are likely to be able to mount them. Defensive works began July 1, 1890, could be armed with eight-inch breech-loading guns the following year; and under the appropriation of September 22, 1889, heavier guns are under course of construction. The guns are now on hand, muzzle-loading guns available for sea-coast use, in connection with these long-range breech-loading rifles. None of our present fortifications would be without value, but all would be used for accessory defense.

Particular attention is invited to the report of the Chief of Engineers, which impresses on us the importance of this subject. In the present estimates for the construction of the eastern coast, the batteries required at some of our principal ports, and gives the details of the expenditures of the last appropriation for the purchase of submarine mines, etc., and estimates for its continuation. Our engineer corps is well equipped for the important duties which the prosecution of this work would devolve upon them. The necessity at some of the harbors for positions of defense more advanced than the points now held, will require legislation empowering this department to secure such sites by purchase or condemnation.

Once built, the cost of maintaining a thorough system of defensive work is comparatively small. The Major-General Commanding, in his report, estimates that it will require only 8,700 men for the garrison of defensive works in time of peace. This will be sufficient to care for the instruction of the militia of the sea-coast States, which must be relied upon to supply the men needed for defense in war, and which he estimates at 87,000.

It is very important that the opportunity for this instruction should be provided at once. They are now being trained and are quite efficient as infantry, light artillery and cavalry. This has been the best that could be done. But it is not probable that their services will be required in large numbers in either of these arms, for we do not wish to invade any other country, nor is ours likely to be invaded by land. Drilled in handling heavy guns, they will supply at a trifling cost the necessary reserve for the small regular contingent maintained in the defenses. Skilled mechanics will seek a militia service, which will give them an opportunity to learn the machinery of modern heavy artillery. It offers to the National Guard of our sea-board States a new and attractive field for drill and study, and it is believed that they will take pride in training themselves to men the defensive works of their own ports on will embrace the opportunity to do so as soon as it is offered. And there is no service in which men are so safe as in the service of such honors or so safe as in the service in the defense of fortifications near their own homes.

The Negroes Organizing to Better Their Condition—A Splendid Man-of-War.

Mrs. Lucy Parsons.

Special to the Journal.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Mrs. Lucy Parsons, the Anarchist, has decided to make this city her future home. The authorities of Chicago have made that city too uncomfortable as a place of abode for her. When the red flag which she displayed from her window was torn down by the police, she was given to understand by the authorities that the proceedings which led up to the massacre of three years ago at the Haymarket should not be repeated. Some sentimental Anarchists thought she would remain in Chicago so that she could care for the grave of her husband, but from her recent remarks it is inferred that such work has no charms for her.

Mayor Greiger has since his election ruled the lawless element with a hand of iron, and consequently those whose ambition it is to "throttle the law" are desirous of getting beyond his control. His recent declaration, too, that any man or body of men who hied the American flag should be drummed out of town, has not endeared him to the Anarchistic heart. Mrs. Parsons on her arrival here will be warmly welcomed by the element that regards her late husband as a martyr and a hero. All others will avoid making her acquaintance.

Indignant Negroes.

Special to the Journal.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 27.—The colored people of the State, indignant at Manager Kittle for refusing them admission to his theater, have resolved to combine and insist on the rights guaranteed them by the result of the war. A convention, fairly representative of the colored race in Wisconsin, met here to-day and established a Civil Rights League for the purpose of securing such legislation as will give them and their posterity equality of rights for the future. The Chairman of the Convention, in a rather bitter address, declared that members of the colored race are being insulted and humiliated in certain hotels and other public places and that there is no law on the statute books of Wisconsin to prevent it. During the late G. A. R. Encampment he said colored veterans who were members of white posts were refused meals and insulted in leading hostilities. To illustrate the prejudice against the colored race, he asserted that a few years ago Fred Douglass was unable to obtain lodging in any hotel in Janesville and that he would have had to spend the night on the streets had not the hospitality of Congressman Williams' mansion been extended to him. There are several colored orators from various parts of the country present.

A Wonderful Locomotive.

Special to the Journal.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Great expectations have been raised as to the possibilities of an extra fast locomotive, which M. Berlier has planned on the system of the water railway engine recently on view at the Exposition. The locomotive is to be worked partly by water and partly by electricity, the line comprising four sets of rails. Those on the outside will be of the "skate" kind, while the locomotive will run safely on an inside ironway of the ordinary pattern. The engine will carry dynamo-electric machinery, which can be slackened or stopped by brakes, as well as made to go at full speed. The electric current can be obtained by overhead conductors, fed at intervals of thirty miles from stations established for the purpose, water being also utilized if possible at these places, so as to produce an economical working of the line. The road is to be built between this city and Dieppe without delay. Trains will run at the rate of 124 miles an hour, so that when the road is extended the whole country can be traversed in a day. The total cost of the line between here and Dieppe is estimated at $15,000,000.

A Formidable Vessel.

Special to the Journal.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—A new ironclad for the Ottoman Government, which was launched to-day by the French Company of the Mediterranean, realizes, it is claimed, the ideal of offensive power sufficient for running fights and of defensive strength adequate to the contest of large armored vessels, while at the same time it possesses perfect maneuverability and moderate displacement. The ship is named the Arthur Paix, after the Captain of the Esmeralda, who was killed in the engagement off Engoume in 1879. The armament of the ironclad is exceedingly formidable. The central redoubt is composed of four turrets, each containing a gun workable by hand and not exceeding 23 tons in weight, which is capable of piercing at one hundred yards a plate of eighteen-inch iron. The ship also carries four guns for rapid fire, eight machine-guns and four tubes for discharging torpedoes.

THE SILVER CONVENTION.

GOOD SPEECHES MADE BY SENATORS STEWART AND BLAND.

Some Resolutions Which Will Exert a Strong Influence in Washington.

Silver's Friends.

Special to the Journal.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 27.—At the Silver Convention this morning Delegate Morse, of Colorado, introduced the following:

Resolved, That the Senators and Representatives in Congress are hereby requested to establish a mint for the coinage of silver with the South American States that shall make silver coin pass current on par with gold in all the Americas of the Western Hemisphere; that they also be requested to open negotiations with the Congress of All-Americans now in session for the building of a railroad from the United States through the States of South America.

After a lively discussion, it was referred to the Committee on Resolutions. A paper from John Thompson, Vice-President of the Chase National Bank, of New York, was then read. It was the judgment of Thompson that the movement for a more liberal use of silver in our currency supply should be gradual, and at first secure the coinage of a maximum of $4,000,000 per month, and see the results produced under augmented coinage. In his deliberative judgment this augmented coinage would pave the way for the adoption of free coinage by acclamation.

The following resolution was offered by Jack, of California, and was received with cheers. It was referred under the rule:

WHEREAS, Wall street and Eastern bondholders are now actually at work striving to elect a Speaker for the approaching Congress whose record is entirely opposed to the silver interests;

WHEREAS, Representatives in Congress should be servants of the people;

WHEREAS, This great Convention shows a unanimity of the public opinion in the Western and Southern Territories in favor of more coinage of silver; therefore it is

Resolved, That Western and Southern Representatives in Congress be required to support some friend of silver for the Speakership of the present House, and that their failure to do so will be the betrayal of the people, warranting their political death.

The Chairman then announced that the Convention would be addressed by Congressman R. T. Bland, of Missouri. Bland was received with a storm of applause and addressed the Convention at some length.

In the course of his speech Bland said the only question with metalists in this country is whether demonetization laws should be at once repealed or whether we should wait the convenience of other powers, including Great Britain. It was a significant fact that there was hardly a man in public life to-day who would assume the responsibility of contending for a single gold standard. Bland spoke at length of the panic of 1873, and said:

"It is not claimed that the demonetization of silver alone caused the panic. There were other contractions of currency in progress, but the probabilities are that had we left the mints open to free coinage of silver there would have been constitutional aid, and a heavy increase in the coinage of silver dollars to counteract the effect of paper contraction. On the continent to the south of us, and to the west in Asia, there are 800,000,000 of people who use only silver as money. They are the best customers for manufacturers and the chief source of foreign trade. We ought to have this trade, and proper legislation of the silver question will greatly aid us in securing it. By free coinage of silver and gold New York, and not London or Paris, would be the money center for the exchanges of the world."

After listening to a paper on the silver question from Thomas Jordan, editor of the New York Mining Record, the Convention took a recess until 2:30 p. m.

The convention reassembled at 2:30 and listened to papers from Judge Morris Richmond and Congressman Symmes, of Colorado. Symmes referred to an article from John Jay Knox, in which Knox took a position adverse to the sentiments of the convention, and said: "And this is the man who advised Congress to demonetize silver from 1870 to 1873, because, as he argued, an American silver dollar exceeds by three per cent the standard of gold, and will not circulate but be exported for recoinage."

Congressman Symmes was followed by Senator Stewart, of Nevada, whose remarks evoked frequent outbursts of applause. The Senator's address was an off-hand talk, and seemed to suit the delegates better than the printed papers, to which they had previously listened.

In the course of his remarks Stewart said: Nations have tried lead, iron and copper, but finally all civilized and semi-civilized nations have decided on silver. The use of silver is pre-historic. The first we heard of the use of silver it was as ornament and later as money. For 3,000 years or more there had been no metals out of which money could be manufactured.

Cut Her Roommate's Throat.

Special to the Journal.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 27.—At 2 o'clock this afternoon Vina Willis, a colored girl living in a rooming house on Union avenue, cut the throat of Minnie Walker, a mulatto woman, with whom she roomed. The Walker woman died immediately, her head being almost severed from her body. The trouble was over a man.

Killed His Commander.

Special to the Journal.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—A soldier of the Bombay Lancers yesterday killed his Commandant and two officers of his regiment.

ELECTRIC FLASHES.

Bar silver, 96%.

There was a panic in the gas trust stock in New York yesterday.

There has been no change in the legislative situation in Montana.

A heavy snow storm is prevailing in the midland counties of England.

Arthur & Ketchum, stock brokers in Wall street, New York, have suspended.

Andrew Banks, an ex-member of the Legislature of Maryland, has failed. Liabilities, $150,000; assets, $100,000.

Effort to Visit U.

Special to the Journal.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—It is understood that as soon as the American Congress decides which city shall have the World's Fair that M. Eiffel will sail for the United States. He has been repeatedly invited to cross the Atlantic by New York and Chicago since the contest between these two cities began, but he declined to accept, as he feared that if he should go to New York that Chicago would charge he preferred the former city, and vice versa. However, when the location is decided upon he is perfectly willing—yes anxious—to visit America and give the benefit of his experience here in connection with the Exposition just closed. E. T. Jeffrey, of Chicago, with whom he is very favorably impressed, has had several interviews with him, all in relation to the World's Fair.

It is quite probable, too, that President Carnot will visit the American Exposition in 1892.

Large Auction Sale.

Special to the Journal.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—The stock of M. Strauss & Son, dealers in tailors' trimmings, was sold at auction to-day to satisfy claims of creditors. The goods remaining sold for about $12,000. The amount of liabilities cannot be learned, but dealers say it will be nearly $200,000. For a long time the firm has been selling at least a portion of its goods at about half market prices. The insolvent firm has a house in New York. Its creditors are almost exclusively Eastern wholesale dealers.

Effects of a Blizzard.

Special to the Journal.

SANTA FE, N. M., Nov. 27.—Col. J. W. Dwyer, a leading stock raiser of Colfax county, who arrived here to-day, states that thirty Mexican sheep herders and five American cowboys lost their lives in the recent blizzard. Dwyer says only a few cattle perished in the storm, but the loss to sheep has been considerable, as they had lately been shorn. In Colfax county cattle will go into the winter in fairly good condition.

Highwayman Captured.

Special to the Journal.

PORTLAND, Or., Nov. 27.—A dispatch from a Wells Fargo & Co. detective at Redding, Cal., states that he has captured the man who has been robbing the mails in Southern Oregon of late. The detective has been following the man ever since the Coos Bay mail was robbed, some weeks ago.

Indicted for Murder.

Special to the Journal.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The Grand Jury this afternoon returned an indictment for murder in the first degree against Mrs. Hannah B. Southworth, who killed Stephen Pettus. She was arraigned and pleaded guilty.

The monetary dons in New York have got hold of the idea that the coming Congress will adopt some legislation favorable to the interests of silver, and in consequence the heretofore despised white metal is beginning to assume more importance. They have no feeling on the subject, however, but the money-making instinct, for they would speculate in coffee if the market would only fluctuate sufficiently.

Robert Bonner says that Maud S. and Sonol will both be put in training next year and an attempt made to lower the trotting record. If he would let them trot against each other, say for some charitable object, it would be an immense success.

NEW TO-DAY.

NOTICE TO DELINQUENT TAX-PAYERS.

OFFICE OF THE COUNTY AUDITOR.

Washoe County, Nevada, Reno, Nov. 27, 1889.—Notice is hereby given to all whom it may concern that the delinquent list of the State and county taxes for the year 1889—where the delinquent tax, exclusive of poll taxes and penalties, exceeds the sum of three hundred ($300) dollars—has been this day deposited with the District Attorney of Washoe County, Nevada, and unless the delinquent taxes therein specified are paid to the County Treasurer, as ex-officio Tax Receiver, within twenty days from the first publication of this notice, action will be commenced by the District Attorney for collection of said taxes and costs.

250 Beautiful Lots For Sale!

A RARE CHANCE FOR AN INVESTMENT AND A HOME.

THE MOST LOVELY PORTION OF RENO.

Facing the Truckee—The Aristocratic Avenue Riverside Driveway—Splendid Sewerage—Healthy Location and Safe From Fire.

The proprietor is now ready to receive proposals for lots in Powning's Addition. The map gives a good idea of the tract, which is situated between the Central Pacific Railroad and the Truckee River, and commences on the west at a point three blocks distant from Virginia Street, making it the most central and convenient of any portion of the rapidly growing town of Reno. Unlike any other part of the town this Addition faces the beautiful Truckee River and Riverside Avenue is certain to become the fashionable driveway of the country. The streets are 80 feet wide, while Riverside and Keystone Avenues are intended to be 100 feet in width. All alleys are 20 feet wide. The soil is a rich gravelly loam, and susceptible of the highest state of cultivation. Being situated as it is it is more safe from fire than any other section. The regular lots are 50x140 feet. The sewerage is perfect.

Before Buying Elsewhere Parties will do Well to Look at These Lots.

TEHAMA COUNTY,

30,378 27-1003 Acres.

Township 26 N, Range 7 W, Mt.

Diablo Meridian.

This township lies on the eastern slope of the Coast Range of mountains, and from 12 to 20 miles west from Red Bluff, the county seat of Tehama County. The field notes of the U. S. Surveyor who laid out this township, says: "This township is well adapted for grazing, as it affords pasturage for large herds of cattle. It is well watered by the various tributaries of Elder Creek. It is also very valuable for its timber, which consists of a heavy growth of yellow and sugar pine spruce, and cedar. There is a heavy undergrowth of chaparral, chemical and manzanita." The even sections are in most instances government land, so that the parts most valuable as adjacent to this range might easily be secured at government price, namely, $2.50 per acre for single quarter sections.

In Section 9, coal was discovered recently by some farmers, but nothing has been done to develop the mine, although samples which have been tested show the coal to be of excellent quality.

We are assured that a Railroad heading for the Coast Range, running through the Coast Range timber belt will be built very near this ranch. Price for the whole, consisting of 10,378 27-100 acres will be $35,000.
